

David Kolmer

Jennifer Moore

IDT535:Instructional Games and Simulations

14 April 2021

Storyline or Captivate

The never-ending debate of which is better? Storyline or Captivate?

1. After spending some time in Storyline or Captivate and reviewing articles (including the two linked) what issues are you encountering in Storyline or Captivate?

I have used both Articulate Storyline and Adobe Captivate over the years. Although I know my way around Adobe Photoshop, Adobe Audition and Adobe Premiere and I really like those programs, I have never really found Adobe Captivate that appealing. I suppose I have never really given it the amount of focus that I have for Articulate Storyline.

2. What have you discovered that you really like?

I really like how Articulate Storyline is based off of Microsoft PowerPoint. To me this just makes more sense because PowerPoint is more similar to eLearning than the other Adobe products I mentioned. I also just really didn't like the old versions of Captivate. I know that it has come a long way since Adobe purchased them and they do some really fancy automated actions for conditional logic... but people tend to like one or another and am an Articulate boy! Especially now that Articulate 360 introduced Articulate Rise. That app is phenomenal.

3. What do you want to do that you have not been able to do?

I want to find a way to actually have a real leader board in an LMS system that pulls data from a SCORM based eLearning. I am seeking out a new LMS system now for the credit union I work at and I have been to dozens of sales meetings now... and they all say the same joke. A computer programmer will say "Oh, yes we have the gamifications, we do badges." So, maybe I should just use the Articulate LMS, and I guess I would if it wasn't being discontinued in December of 2021. Any ideas or LMS recommendations would be greatly appreciated.

Works Sited

Source Section (Chapter) Title

Year Published Source Title Date

<http://webpage.com>